COACH ENTERS ARMY; BOARD GRANTS LEAVE

Plans to Pick Successor to Ray Overturf Not Discussed

BOARD RESOLUTION ENDORSES P. T. A.

Teachers to Be Selected at Adjourned Meeting Monday, June 21

Football Coach Ray Overturf, who was inducted into the army last Thursday, was granted a leave of absence to enter military service when the board of education met Monday night.

Overturf, inducted into the army as a private, has orders to report to his Ashtabula draft board June 17. Overturf came here from Ashtabula two years ago to take over the reins as football mentor.

Since the present school term is now ending, school board members did not discuss plans for picking a successor to Overturf. Appointment of teachers for the 1943-44 school term was deferred until an adjourned meeting of the board Monday night, June 21.

Two Resignations

Two resignations were accepted at last night's meeting. Mrs. Lucille Kunkel, teacher at the Fourth Street school, announced her retirement. The other resignation was that of Mrs. Vivienne Will, secretary in the High School nurse's office.

Miss Mona Cahill, one of the graduating seniors, was named to a secretarial position in the Trades Class office.

School board members went on record as favoring the organization of a Parent-Teacher association in Salem by adopting a motion by Members John T. Burns and George P. Lozier that "the board endorse the formation of a P.-T. A. and express our willingness to cooperate therewith."

Use of several school rooms by teachers for conducting summer school classes also was approved.

Attend Workshop

Supt. E. S. Kerr reported on the trip he and the elementary school principals made to Columbus June 2 to attend a "workshop" on reading and primary grades promotion, held at Ohio State university. Many helpful suggestions on Salem's low-grade program were made by the university specialists, he said.

A letter was received from E. School st. residents near the Fourth Street school building complaining about the dust blown from the school grounds. The complaint was referred to a committee.

Miscellaneous bills totaling $2,952.71 were ordered paid.

Finding Against School Board For Water Bill

A notice of findings for recovery in the amount of $1,892.88, representing unpaid water bills, has been filed with the board of education by State Examiner S. A. Boltz who has just completed an audit of city records.

The amount covers the period from Oct. 1, 1940, to Sept. 30, 1942. Former Service Director Charles Kennedy installed meters at the school buildings in the fall of 1940. The state examiner, in filing the notice with the school board, pointed out that the state supreme court had ruled that the furnishing of free water to a school was unconstitutional.

ROADSIDE PARKS PROVING POPULAR

Columbiana county's roadside parks, established and maintained by the state highway department, are being popularized early this summer.

Total registration at the parks in May was 2,800. E. R. McCullough, highway division engineer, announced today. Belmont county parks had a total registration of 13,056 for the month.

The parks are located strategically, insofar as mileage is concerned. Any one of them may be reached with a minimum expenditure of gasoline or wear and tear on tires, McCullough pointed out.

SALEM SLAYER FOUND GUILTY

Jurors File Manslaughter Instead of a Second Degree Verdict

LISBON, June 8.—A jury of ten women and two men found William Redmelovich, of Canton, not guilty of murder in the second degree as charged, but guilty of manslaughter, in the May 5 slaying of Frank Ulrich, 35, a boarder in Redmelovich's property in Salem.

The jury, which took the case at 2 p. m. Monday after five days of trial, brought in the verdict at 7:32 p. m., a little over an hour after the group had been taken out to supper when it became apparent that no verdict could be reached for some time.

C. E. Phillips of Salem, was foreman of the jury which cast seven ballots during their deliberations before all 12 members concurred in a verdict.

Sentence, from one to 20 years in the Ohio penitentiary, was deferred for a period of three days pending possible filing of a motion by defense counsel for a new trial. The defendant, in the meantime, was committed to the Mahoning county jail in Youngstown.

Redmelovich, 56-year-old naturalized Serbian, and former resident of Salem, had been indicted on a charge of murder in the second degree for the shooting of Ulrich, a boarder in the home of Mrs. Frances Porter, when Redmelovich went to the Porter home to collect the rent and force an eviction. The defense had stressed fear and self-defense as the motive for the shooting.

Believe Zero Hour At Hand; Hint Of Amphibious Attack

Huge Allied Shipping Movements In Mediterranean Reported; British Attack on Italian Island of Lampedusa Said to Have Been Repulsed

By ROGER GREENE
Associated Press War Editor

Prime Minister Churchill bluntly foreshadowed an imminent Allied invasion of Europe today, declaring "it is evident that amphibious operations of peculiar complexity and hazard on a large scale are approaching."

In Washington, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox further enlivened speculation that the invasion zero hour might be near, declaring that Churchill's comment on vast Allied amphibious operations in the offing was "a conservative statement."

At the same time, dispatches reaching Stockholm quoted Berlin military quarters as saying that Nazi officers must count on an Allied invasion "from hour to hour."

Even as Churchill spoke, the Rome radio asserted that British sea-borne forces had attempted to land on the Italian island of Lampedusa, about 70 miles off the Tunisian coast. The report was not confirmed immediately by Allied sources.

The broadcast said the assault had been repulsed and that several British naval vessels had been sunk.

Ship Movements Reported

Churchill's statement, bristling with references to Allied "forward steps" and "operations now impending in the European theater," capped a series of reports recently on huge Allied shipping movements in the Mediterranean and a rising tempo of invasion jitters in Italy.

"I shall make no predictions as to what will happen in the future and still less in the near future," Churchill told the house of commons, in London.

"All I can say is that the Anglo-American policy, strategy and economy of the war were brought into full focus and function in those 15 days of talks in Washington."

Allied plans, he said, could best be described as "directed to the application upon the enemy of force in its most intense and violent form."

Churchill pledged an even greater aerial assault upon Germany, and at the same time expressed confidence that the Nazi U-boat menace was being rapidly overcome.

In the battle of Tunisia, he said, the Axis lost 248 prisoners—24,000 more than previously announced—and 50,000 killed, while the British 8th and 1st armies lost 37,000 killed and missing. The American 2nd army corps alone captured 37,000 prisoners, including 33,000 Germans.

Capt. Gordon Keyes Is Injured In Mishap

Capt. Gordon F. Keyes, Jr., of Salem is in "fairly good" condition in an army base hospital at Mid-dletown, Pa., after bailing out of an arm plane he was testing over Hershey, Pa.

Capt. Keyes said the motor caught fire for some unexplained reason. All he remembers is cutting the motor switch and "going over the side" in his parachute. He was found in a plowed field with two severe leg injuries, a possible fracture of the skull, and a broken rib.

Capt. Keyes, one of the first men in this district to enter the army air corps, he served in the aerial transport command and was one of several U. S. pilots loaned to Pan American Airways. He saw service in Africa and in China.

MISSING THE POINT

The striking similarity between the views of Norman Thomas in a recent radio broadcast and the views of many government spokesmen concerning the socialization of all or most national activities after the war suggests that Mr. Thomas might properly be taken into the cabinet.

Both he and the New Dealers are having more and more trouble missing the main point; it is something like trying to ignore a concert grand piano in a 12x14 living room. That is the fact private enterprise has regained all the confidence in its ability to get results that its unfriendly critics destroyed from 1933 up to the afternoon of Dec. 7, 1941.

War production hasn't been the result of socialization. It has been the result of turning loose private enterprise on a national emergency, with some of the hobbles loosened and the curb bit slacked off a trifle. A country that has been pulled out of a hole by private enterprise isn't likely to leap at the chance to turn against it the instant the war has been won and the panting socialists and bureaucrats rush in to demand the credit.

It's far more likely that the people may conclude in their slow but infallible manner that if the government would allocate a billion dollars a year in peacetime to encouraging private enterprise, instead of concentrating on giving it a black eye and a headache, the post-war job could be done twice as well at considerably less than half the price the socializers are expecting to collect for their dubious services.

OUR NATIVE BACKWARDNESS

A preliminary report of one out of every two ration book applications messed up under the new plan of applying for and receiving war ration book No. 3 by mail means an important experiment has failed.

Our native backwardness in following printed directions has asserted itself in alarming manner. All citizens who insisted that issuance of ration books could be simplified by using the mails failed to take into account the shortcomings of the illiterate and muddle-minded. The application forms certainly could not be called unusually difficult. Failure to affix proper postage and failure to fill out all spaces could result only from carelessness or inability to read.

In some quarters, the explanation may be offered that the incredibly bad result reflects dissatisfaction with OPA; that it is a mild form of sabotage. It would be more consoling to believe that than to be forced to conclude that upward of half the population of Ohio can't follow directions printed in English, but the truth probably lies in that direction. Persons who have had previous experience with the public's ability to follow simple directions are least surprised. They might not have predicted a 50 percent failure, but they wouldn't have predicted much less.

UNIVERSAL HABIT OF EATING

It is reassuring to know that the first of what probably will become a long series of United Nations conferences—the Hot Springs conference on food and agriculture—ended on a note of good fellowship and confidence.

Nothing is more nearly calculated to assure good fellowship and confidence among conferees of any kind or station than the subject of eating, particularly better and bigger eating. It is a topic that permits no really sharp disagreements. Whatever differences of opinion may arise can be settled quickly by returning to the basic proposition, which is that eating is one of the finest of all universal habits and there should be more of it.

Due to the secrecy that veiled everything but the generalities of the Hot Springs seminar on eating, it is not possible to know the details of the enthusiasm that reached a crescendo on the closing day. In all probability, they were concerned with net increases in the quality and amount of food desired in the post-war years; that seems a safe conjecture which could not possibly be criticized for its possible effect on any delegate's composure.

There were times during the conference when Americans who never have attended and never will attend a really momentous conference could have stated their positions like statesmen, if they had been at Hot Springs. It just goes to show how basic, how universal, how overwhelming the subject of eating is. The least of us is qualified to argue the case in its favor with as much earnestness as the most expert of the experts.

SATURATION POINT

After studying the probabilities of the higher income tax collections smuggled into the compromise bill still awaiting the President's signature, most taxpayers agree with the congressmen who have been talking about a saturation point in direct taxation. At the same time they feel nervous about the prediction by other congressmen that the next move will be a still further increase in income tax rates imposed on the concealed increase brought about by the decision to "recover" 25 percent of the revenue due on 1942 incomes while taking 100 percent of the revenue due on current income.

If a saturation point has been reached, undoubtedly the next great tax argument in congress and throughout the country will be over a federal sales tax. Even that would be only a drop in the bucket, unless put into effect at an unprecedented rate. The treasury estimated more than a year ago that a retail tax of 10 percent, exempting sales to the federal government and to state and local governments, on commodities alone (not services) would produce less than six billion dollars. According to official fiscal plans, at least 13 billion dollars of additional revenue will be needed.

The sales tax is unique among pending ideas for improving the fiscal position of the United States. While it has existed as a possibility since income tax revenue began to decline during the depression, it has no friends or supporters. All politicians, spokesmen for labor, friends of the common man, taxpayers and forward-looking are unalterably opposed to it. They have thought up dozens of excellent reasons why the sales tax never should be given a second thought, but like virtue—or perhaps sin—it keeps bobbing up for further consideration.

There is only one argument in its favor; it produces revenue. According to the old-fashioned notions of taxation, that is a compelling argument, which explains why the sales tax probably will be considered. Producing revenue in wartime is an old-fashioned necessity.

THE STARS SAY:

For Wednesday, June 9

ACCORDING to the lunar transits there may be a state of conflict and contradiction in the general conditions of this day. There is promise of moderately successful and satisfactory activity in many fields of endeavor. Unwise changes may be made. With care and restraint there should be promise of success and good fortune.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves in a state of conflict during the year, with promise of gaining desired aims attended by personal happiness and fair fortune, but a strong urge to impulsive moves, emotional outbursts, erratic or irregular conduct, may prove distressing. Careless or strange handling of papers, documents or other writings, may be deceptive, causing regret and loss unless rigidly curbed or regulated. Romantic affairs may also partake of this queer irresponsibility. Be prudent and above board in all.

A child born on this day should have versatility and ingenuity, but this may be undermined by impetuosity or emotionalism, inclining to erratic or peculiar behavior, jeopardizing its happiness and good fortune.

After looking over the war bond sales, Harry Hopkins must have a long thought or two about what he overlooked in the good old days of $5,000,000,000 deficits.

Sampling a few examples of Washington propaganda yields the hope that Washington is having more success with its foreign propaganda than it is with its home propaganda.

Income taxpayers must not become confused with the pay-as-you-earn new tax plan which is to become effective later. The June 15 income tax must be met as usual—there's no getting away from it.

SUCCESSFUL DIAGNOSIS NECESSARY

Physical Examination Is One Step

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I AM WRITING this in a series of articles on diagnosis in order to try to give you a sympathetic understanding of your doctor. In order to treat you successfully, he must make a successful diagnosis. Recently I emphasized that the first step in diagnosis which the modern physician uses, and the most important, is to obtain a history—the patient's account of the illness in the patient's own words. This week I wish to discuss the second step in diagnosis, which is the physical examination.

Dr. Clendingen will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The physical examination consists in endeavoring to accumulate data about the patient's appearance and the signs he displays which are evident to the physician's trained senses—sight, feeling and hearing.

It may seem to some of my readers that I am neglecting methods of diagnosis by machines. We live in a machine age and it is notorious that people in telling you about their doctor will tell you how he took the blood pressure with a machine and how he had an x-ray made and how he examined the heart with an electrocardiogram and how he examined the blood and used a microscope.

Importance of History
These things are all very fine, but they do not take the place of the history and the physical examination. According to the best authorities the history of the patient's illness, as told by the patient, is of 50 per cent importance in the final diagnosis, the physical examination, 25 per cent, and all the mechanical, microscopical and instrumental methods are worth about 25 per cent in the final summary of the average diagnosis.

Let me illustrate by taking a common condition, jaundice or yellow jaundice. The patient can see this and to that extent it is a symptom, so the patient tells you when it started and other things about it. You can see it and to that extent it is a sign, and part of the physical examination. Your seeing the fact that the patient is jaundiced confirms the patient's statement.

Now you begin to analyze it and you find that the patient says it came on without pain. In making a physical examination of the abdomen over the gallbladder, you find that there is no tenderness and you cannot feel any lump which would indicate the gallbladder or an enlargement of the liver. The patient says that attacks of jaundice have occurred a number of times in the last few years.

Blood Examinations
You can make some blood examinations, which would give a mechanical interpretation of the jaundice. The icteric index would tell you mathematically just how deep it is, and what is called the Vandenberg test would tell another fact and an x-ray of the gallbladder would show whether the jaundice could be due to gallstones.

But as a matter of fact, you do not need this mechanical help because you can analyze the situation from your physical examination.

The fact that there is no pain and no tenderness and no palpable gallbladder indicates that there are no gallstones or gallbladder disease. The fact that you cannot feel the liver rules out cirrhosis. The fact that the patient is subject to recurrent attacks would indicate that the jaundice was due to blood destruction rather than to stoppage of the bile.

Questions and Answers

A. C. C.:—Are exercises of the muscles of the eye, as recommended by some people, good for astigmatism?

Answer: No. The only muscles of the eye that you can exercise are not attached to any portion of the eye which controls accommodation. You might as well open and shut the hood of your radiator 20 times a day in order to get your engine to quit missing.

C. N.:—I have been using saccharine tablets in my coffee and tea in place of sugar and was told it is hard on the heart. Could you please tell me if this is so?

Answer: Irresponsible and gossipy people are always saying something about saccharine to make those who take it uncomfortable. An extensive investigation, carried out over a period of years, showed that people can take saccharine indefinitely without any harm whatever.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendingen has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. Let your Gas range help you to save ration coupons!

This year you're going to appreciate the efficiency of your Gas range more than ever... for, with rationing in effect, home-canning has become the most urgent need for the average family.

The Government warns that the average adult needs 90 quarts of fruits and vegetables per year. You may not be able to get them for your family on your ration coupons, but you can protect the family's health through home-canning.

Specifically, each adult should have: 25 quarts of tomatoes and tomato juice, 30 quarts of fruit and fruit juice, 15 quarts of green and yellow vegetables, 10 quarts of other vegetables, 10 quarts of leafy greens.

Grow all of these you can. Buy all that is seasonable... and make sure next fall and winter that your family gets a well balanced diet. And check with the Home Service Department of your Gas company for any information on your canning problems. They'll be glad to help you.

THAT MAN IS MINE by May Christie

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful Ann Foster was worried when she learned the sales force at "Marks-Park Avenue" was to be reduced after the Christmas holidays. Julia, her practical minded sister, an airline stewardess on the New York-Miami run, persistently encourages her to marry wealthy Vince Ogden, but Ann does not love him. At their small apartment she is greeted by Vince and Julia in festive holiday mood. Forgetting her worries, Ann joins Vince and Julia on a tour of the night spots. The following day at LaGuardia Airport, Julia introduces Ann to Jim Brent, handsome pilot officer en route to Florida to train cadets. Later, Ann is offered the opportunity to work at the Miami Beach branch of "Marks-Park Avenue." Vince, whose yacht, "The Pelican," is moored off Miami, accompanies her on the South-bound train. The manager, impressed with Ann's beauty, engages her as a model. Ann renews her acquaintance with Jim Brent at Mrs. Avery Willard's War Relief Tea. From Vince she learns that Jim is teaching their hostess, Lotus Willard, to fly her plane and the consensus is he will supplant Hank Brugger, society hanger-on, in the frivolous Lotus' life. Philotony, Vince and Hank, Ann sells lottery tickets on a beautiful gown donated by "Marks-Park Avenue." Later, dancing with Jim, she is aware they are mutually attracted—but senses a certain aloofness in him.

CHAPTER SIX

Vince breezed in. He grinned at Ann and Jim. "Fiddle fiddle! I looked everywhere for you, and came to down my sorrows—" "Lay off the liquor, Vince," she said firmly. But with the sniff of a setter, he headed for the bar. Alone again with her, Jim remarked: "That's a lovely perfume you're using. What is it, Miss Foster?" "Jasmine." "Night-blooming?" She laughed. "The bottle kind. See out of the window—that bush—that's night-blooming jasmine—it only opens and gives out its scent under cover of darkness." He said, darily: "I fancy you could teach me plenty of things." She saw in his eyes an odd expression. Though his lips were smiling, those eyes were measuring her, assessing her. The band stopped its music in the great salon beyond. The master-of-ceremonies walked in and up to Ann. "Will you please come to the platform and draw the winning number for your firm's gown, Miss Foster?" he asked. She rose. "If you'll excuse me?" She bowed to Jim and went into the salon. He followed. Rat-tat-tat on the drums once more. Another little speech from the master-of-ceremonies, including the pleasant statement that the amount paid by the guests for the chances on the gown now totaled $756. Then Ann drew the winning number, unfolded the twisted scrap of paper, and called out: "fifty-nine."

A murmur went through the audience. But no claimant. She repeated the number. "Holy smoke! That's one of my numbers!" Vince cried. He ambled up to the platform. "A kiss for the winner!" he bawled, making a dab at Ann. She held the prize gown in front of her much like a beautiful young matador, dodging the onslaughts of the bull.

Laughter swept the spectators. Ann was furious with silly Vince. But she mustn't show it. She must smile. "I present," he shouted, "the winning gown to Miss—Ann—Foster."

Thereupon loud hand-clapping, cheers, and more laughter. "That's very kind of you, Vince. Thank you!" Embarrassed, she must act graciously now.

In the din, practically nobody heard her. Vince and she were both members of the committee—they'd worked like slaves selling tickets—and if he wanted to give her the gown, he had a perfect right to do so.

It really was lovely, with its long orchid skirt of chiffon velvet, its tulle-trimmed bodice that was the color of an American beauty rose spangled with sequins, and its high sash.

Her firm, Marks-Park Avenue, would certainly have priced such a creation at least at $250—and though, as their model, she invariably wore lovely clothes, she actually owned nothing expensive and exotic. This bizarre gown would look perfect on her.

Just then, nearby, she heard a stout woman sneer: "Isn't it funny that the people connected with these charities always are the winners?"

Angered at the injustice, and sensitive, Ann moved to the megaphone, holding up her hand for silence.

"I wish to auction off this gown for the War Relief," she cried. "I start the bidding myself at $50. Speak up, everybody!"

Vince, who was back among the audience, bawled: "$75."

The catty woman who had made the criticism shouted: "$100."

And the fun was on. Mrs. Avery Willard offered $125. A male voice ran it up to $150. Vince topped that by fifty dollars more.

Someone called: "$215." There was a pause, broken by Vince adding another ten dollars. "No more offers?" Ann queried through the loud-speaker. Vince outbid himself. "$250" he offered.

There were no more bids. The master-of-ceremonies handed Ann a little hammer. She tapped it on the small table at her side. "Going—gone!" she cried. Then: "Mr. Vince Ogden is again the winner." Vince trundled up to the platform. Would he give her the gown again? She wondered.

Vince was nettled by her previous refusal, and not understanding the reason of it, decided he would teach a lesson to hard-hearted Ann. "I present this gown," he said from the platform, "to a young lady who will beautifully adorn it"—here he hiccupped—"a brunette young lady—" he added pointedly, taking the gown from Ann. "I present it to Miss Julia Foster."

There were gasps of surprise from the audience, mingled with chuckles and then applause, as the much less pretty sister walked straight up to the platform and unhesitatingly accepted the gift.

"Thanks, old boy! Cinderella steps out!" said Julia under her breath. If Ann was a fool, she wasn't one. She'd certainly coveted this gown!

With that chore done, the famous cocktail-tea was nearing its close. With donations from those absent sent to Mrs. Willard Avery by check, and brought to a round sum by herself, the grand total, read by the master-of-ceremonies, amounted to $3000.

"And now," said Vince to the hostess, "you'll come aboard my yacht on Biscayne Bay and dine? I'll round up the gang and we'll have a little fun. Later we'll all move over to The Raton and have a whirl at the tables. Okay with you, Lotus?"

Mrs. Willard, who knew the excellence of Vince's chef, and also adored gambling in any shape or form, accepted his invitation. She went straight to Jim Brent, whom she'd previously invited to dinner, and told him it would be aboard Vince's "Pelican."

Jim tried to excuse himself. But she was firm. And after all she'd done for the cause which he was heart and soul for, it would be rank ingratitude to back out. She hinted at that, sweetly.

Vince headed for Julia and Ann. Julia was piqued before the huge Louise XVth mirror in the salon, holding the glittering gown in front of her, her brown eyes sparkling.

"You two girls," he said thickly, "are coming aboard the Pelican to dine."

"Not I," said Ann quickly. She was annoyed with Vince. Her name had been publicly linked too much with him this afternoon. It wasn't that she was angry because he had given Julia the gorgeous gown. When she'd reacted to it, she'd never expected to get it herself, and hard-working Julia rated something lovely, sartorially speaking. Five days a week—and sometimes nights—she was garbed in air-stewardess uniform. But Vince had gotten rather tight in public. She felt not only that he'd made a monkey out of himself, but dragged her in to the spectacle too.

MANY STATES CUT LIQUOR AMOUNTS

Rationing Programs Are Adopted In 13 States, Survey Shows

(By International News Service)

Liquor rationing throughout the United States appears likely to become more severe as months pass. Supplies in the New York area are relatively plentiful and may continue so for some time, but liquor dealers already are complaining of scarcity of many items and the tendency to higher prices.

In many bars it no longer is possible to obtain favorite brands at all times. Substitutes are offered and usually accepted. Retail prices meantime are keeping pace with wholesale rates.

Sales Already Restricted In other areas of the country, however, supplies not only have been drastically reduced but in many states liquor already is being rationed.

According to a recent survey by Allied Liquor Industries, Inc., 13 states where state liquor stores are the rule are restricting purchases per customer as follows:

Alabama	1 qt. daily
Idaho	4 qts. weekly
Iowa	1 qt. weekly
Michigan	2 qts. weekly
N. Carolina	1 pt. weekly
Ohio	variable
Oregon	1 qt. weekly
Utah	1.05 gal. monthly
Virginia	1 pt. weekly
West Virginia	1 pt. daily
Washington	1 qt. weekly
Wyoming	variable
Montana	variable

Meeting recently in Detroit, officials of the National Alcoholic Beverage control association predicted that rationing soon would be introduced on a nation-wide scale. Actually, such rationing has been in force in most of the 45 "wet" states since last year. In the non-monopoly of "open" states, where retailing of liquor is in the hands of private business, and particularly in New York state, the effects are only now becoming noticeable.

Stocks Will Last 2 Years

According to latest available figures from New York sources, total distilled stocks in the United States at the end of last March totaled 461,146,250 tax gallons. Consumption normally totals about 150,000,000 gallons a year, but last year it went up to 190,000,000 gallons.

Thus, at the current rate of consumption, stocks will be exhausted in two years or so; that is, unless the government permits distilleries to manufacture whiskey along with production of industrial alcohol for war needs.

Clinic For Children Shows Less Defects

LISBON, June 8. — The annual summer-roundup of children of preschool age conducted in the Presbyterian church here Monday by the Parent-Teacher association, revealed a great improvement in the health of the children with fewer defects recorded by the physicians and dentists in the clinic, than in former years, according to Mrs. William White, president of the association.

Sixty-three children who will enter school for the first time next fall were examined by the doctors assisted by county nurses who donated their services for the occasion.

Parents will receive reports on any child in need of medical or surgical attention, and children who have any such defects remedied before the opening of the new school term, will be special guests of the Parent-Teacher association at its first meeting in September, Mrs. White stated.

Milda Jean Hartley Weds Ray Coppock At Winona

Miss Milda Jean Hartley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hartley of Moundsville, W. Va., and Ray Coppock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Coppock of Winona, were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at the Winona Methodist church.

The double ring service was performed by Rev. Jack Klein before an altar banked with lilies, peonies, mock-orange, lilies and palms. Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Donald Dussenberry offered a 15-minute piano recital which included the wedding marches. Mrs. Clyde Bennett sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly."

The bride was lovely in a long white frosted organza gown fashioned with long sleeves, sweetheart neckline and a full skirt attached to a fitted bodice. She also wore a strand of pearls, a gift of the groom, and carried a bouquet of baby-breath and white roses mingled with maidenhair fern. Her fingertip veil fell from a cluster of blossoms.

Miss Kathrine Krinke of Mt. Pleasant, maid-of-honor, was dressed in a light blue frosted organza dress with short puffed sleeves. Her bouquet was of pink roses.

Her other attendant was her sister, Mrs. B. F. Garcia of Petersburg, Va., who wore a dusty pink gown and carried a bouquet of yellow roses. Both girls wore matching headresses of grosgrain ribbon.

Elmer Stamp served as best man and Clyde Bennett and Glenn Watkins served as ushers.

The bride's mother wore a navy blue print crepe with a corsage of pink and white roses and Mrs. Coppock chose a navy ensemble with a corsage of pink and white roses.

Mrs. Coppock, a graduate of Moundsville High school, attended West Liberty college and has been teaching school in Waynesburg and Winona. She was formerly employed at the Mt. Pleasant school.

Mr. Coppock is a graduate of Salem High school, class of '38, Canton Actual Business college and is now employed in the purchasing department at the Deming Co.

The couple left for a short wedding trip and will reside at the Alfred Fowler residence in Winona.

For traveling Mrs. Coppock wore an orchid light wool suit.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Burgess, Mrs. William Krinke, Miss Juanita Walters of Mt. Pleasant; Miss Bernice Scott and Miss Dorothy Powell of Wintersville; Miss Sarah Lou Grinnell of Chester, W. Va.; E. L. Coppock of Lisbon; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bonsall, Mrs. Dora Goshorn, Miss Margaret Bowers and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brown of Canton. Other guests were from Salem, Greenford, Columbiana and Winona.

Salem High Grads Of 50 Years Ago To Celebrate

Seventeen of Original 25 Members of '93 Class Are Still Living

The class of '93 of Salem High school, pictured above on the steps of the old high school building, will hold its 50th reunion when the Salem High School Alumni association's 61st annual banquet is held Friday night in the Masonic temple.

Of the original 25 members of the class, 17 are still living, some now residing as far away as California. The class expects to be well represented at the Friday night affair.

The school building where these students received their education, then known as the Salem Union school, stood on the present Fourth street school grounds.

The Union school building was erected in 1862, records show. Condemned some 30 years later, the structure was torn down around 1896 and the present edifice erected in 1897.

The pioneer building, a nine-room school, housed eight grammar grades and the High school room, members of the class of '93 recall.

M. E. Hard was superintendent of schools at that time. C. S. Barnes, principal, had the assistance of the Misses Kate L. Safford and Lillian Robb. Miss Hattie V. Creel served as music teacher.

Harry W. Young was president of the class of '93. Other officers were: Vice president, Ned Y. Howell; secretary, Carrie A. Pow; treasurer, Edna A. Richards; prophetess, Myra A. Pow; historian, Leah R. Cohen; class song, given by Elizabeth Gilson; poet, Phil Hiddleston.

Miss Elaine Steele and Mrs. Lewis Moushey were guests.

Mrs. Thomas Snyder will entertain the group in two weeks at her home on E. Seventh st.

Eating Levels May Drop In 1944, Warns Economics Bureau

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Unless things look up, be ready to change your diet somewhat or pull in your belt, come 1944.

The Agriculture department is concerned about the situation in some foods.

Its bureau of economics, in a review, said today there are enough rationed foods on hand, together with expected production, to maintain present eating levels for the remainder of 1943. But here's the rub—unrationed foods are not too plentiful and the anticipated supplies for the fall months are not too favorable. That goes for eggs, cereals, fruits and vegetables.

Vegetable output is running about 13 percent below last year. Early freezes have cut crops of apricots, cherries, peaches, plums and prunes materially below 1942. The peach crop in southern states may be but half of its normal size.

Supplies of eggs in the fall and winter "will be considerably below current levels," the report said.

Livestock may be affected adversely. Unless there are extraordinary grain yields, the present level of production cannot be maintained beyond 1943, it was said. Consumption of feed grains now threatens to exceed production.

Butter and cheese stocks are plentiful for this year, however.

GERMANS DEPEND ON LAND SOLDIERS

But, Analyst Points Out, Bombs Will Eliminate Their Equipment

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

What justification is there for the German claim that even though the Allies invade southern Europe they will find the Axis armies unconquerable?

That assertion was made in a Berlin broadcast, picked up by the Associated Press. A commentator was discussing invasion articles in the German army organ Die Wehrmacht. He admitted that the Allies might make a landing somewhere but declared they "would not have the slightest chance in battle against the Axis continental armies with their millions of well-trained and well-equipped troops."

Well, the answer to that is the key to the defeat which the United Nations are now in process of administering to Herr Hitler.

The boogie are arguing from a premise which might have been sound a year ago but no longer holds good. They're clutching at straws which already have been swept past them down the stream.

Stows Wear and Tear

It is a fact—and one not to be overlooked—that the Fuehrer's most powerful weapon is his army, although what once was the mightiest fighting-machine ever put together is now showing many signs of wear and tear. It's true, too, that the Allies would be up against a terrific task if they were faced with the necessity of smashing that Nazi army with land forces alone. Hitler might be able to defend himself indefinitely.

The point is that he would be sitting inside a great defensive circle. His communications would be short and he would be able to fling his forces in any direction quickly to meet attack. All his war industries would be safe inside that ring. The Allies, on the other hand, would be striking them from the outside of the huge perimeter, and their communications would be long and difficult. Such a German defensive position would be just about impregnable.

However, that's one of those "might have been" situations. As things stand, the Allies aren't compelled to crush Hitler entirely with land troops. In fact, they can do a goodly portion of the job in a much easier way. That's by bombing.

Vulnerable to Bombing

You will note that the Berlin commentator assumed his master's troops would be "well equipped." He overlooked the fact that Hitler's iron ring, for defense against a land army, renders his entire set-up vulnerable to bombing in view of the shift of the balance of power to the Allies.

The United Nations now can reach Hitler's communications and war industries across all parts of the circle. When they achieve their invasion of southern Europe they will add further to their facilities for reaching every Axis manufacturing center and line of communication. Air bases in northern Italy, for instance, would be a tremendous asset.

The day and night blasting which the Anglo-American and Russian air forces are administering to the reich is stripping Hitler of his ability to keep his army "well equipped." One of these days the cumulative effect of this aerial offensive is going to hit him all of a sudden and he will find himself with a wehrmacht which still will have great strength in manpower but will lack the arms with which to defend itself.

Then will be the time when the Allies will send their own armies marching against the Hitlerian forces. Actually, of course, the terrific aerial and naval bombardments which the United Nations are laying down against the enemy as further evidenced in today's news despatches, are the preliminaries to invasion. That is to say, the invasion operations already are under way even though we can't foresee the exact moment of landing.

Meanwhile, the Allies holding aerial superiority—and outright supremacy in some areas like the North African theatre—Hitler's

YANK BEDCHAMBER—ATTU PERIOD

A TIRED YANK catches some sleep during a lull in the fighting on Attu in the Aleutians. Before he removed his shoes and climbed into his sleeping bag he scraped a niche in the muddy tundra for, at the time the photo was taken, there were plenty of Jap snipers still around. That pup tent in the background was a useless shelter in daylight, being nothing more than a target for Jap sharpshooters. (International)

Gyroscope Keeps Navy "Fish" On Straight Course To Target

(By The United Press)

NEW YORK—Meet the "robot sea captain," the gyroscope that takes the helm with a vengeance every time one of Uncle Sam's nephews launches a torpedo at an enemy target.

Once a torpedoman "speaks" to a gyro, sets a dial and says: "There's a Jap cruiser right over there," nothing can take its mind off its business as it rides herd on the fast-moving, hell-bent, explosive mass of machine y that makes up the "tin fish".

Actually the gyroscope is a finely balanced fly wheel suspended on jewel-like bearings snugly housed in the rear compartment or engine room of the torpedo. It is motivated by a powerful jet of compressed air from the torpedo's air flask.

Whirling at a speed of more than 10,000 revolutions per minute, it resists any attempt to change its position in space. If the torpedo shows the slightest sign of veering from its course, the gyro immediately activates a tiny steering engine which in turn checks the rudders.

So perfectly must the gyro perform at high speed that its construction calls for exceedingly precise workmanship and delicate care.

Finished parts must be checked so closely that units are condemned which have microscopic scratches as shallow as two-millionths of an inch. Regular parts are machined down to a tenth-of-a-thousandths of an inch.

Looks Like Jewel

That is why the American Can Co., now making gyroscopes for the two torpedo plants which the company operates for the Navy, has employed former watchmakers and jewelers as gyroscope craftsmen.

"One ten-thousandths of an inch is pretty fine work when you consider that a human hair is 250 times as thick," smiled William Heinle, superintendent of Canco's big plant, as he walked to an assembly table and picked up a finished specimen.

lufthaffe is unable to strike from within his charmed circle at the distant production centers of the United Nations. Our strength grows daily while his decreases.

had become fascinated when he saw a toy model manufactured for children. Years later gyros won widespread notice when three large types were used as stabilizers on the Italian luxury liner, Conte di Savoia.

Until the gyro principle of direction control was adapted to the torpedo these destructive weapons were so unruly that in a number of cases they were known to reverse their course completely and strike the very boats that launched them. The Germans are known to have lost more than one boat by their own torpedoes in World War I.

Speeders Granted Hearings Before Losing Gas Books

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS—OPA legal experts announced that, as an aid to war price and rationing boards in determining what standards should be used in revoking or suspending the gasoline ration of persons convicted of speeding, the following recommendations are being made to the boards.

1. No board should revoke rations without first giving a speeder a hearing so he can state any valid mitigating circumstances in connection with the offense.

2. In first offenses involving speeds of 36 to 40 miles per hour, a warning letter is recommended.

3. For speeds of 41 to 45, suspensions of all rations for a period of from five to seven days is considered in order.

4. Between 46 and 50, suspensions of all rations for 10 to 15 days are in order.

5. Between 51 and 55, from 15 to 30 days.

6. Between 56 and 60, from 40 to 60 days.

7. In cases where first offenders are convicted of going more than 60 miles per hour, revocations of between 60 days and "the duration" are considered in order.

8. In cases of second offenses involving speeds of over 50 miles an hour, serious consideration should be given to a "duration" suspension as well as in cases of third offenders.

9. In all cases, coupons should be detached from the books covering the period off the suspension and voided immediately following the hearing and the clerk of the board should hold the book for the period of the suspension except in unusual cases.

FUNDS NEEDED FOR POST-WAR PLAN

Problem of Re-Conversion Is Stressed by Airplane Builder

OMAHA, Neb. — Congress must make some provision so industry can set aside reserves before taxes for reconversion to peacetime operations.

That was the assertion of Glenn L. Martin, famed airplane manufacturer, during a recent visit to Omaha to inspect his huge assembly plant at Port Crook, Neb.

Unless this is done, the Baltimore industrialist said, there will be widespread collapse of industry and appalling unemployment after the war.

"The people have been looking to a backlog of civilian needs, cars, refrigerators, and hundreds of other things, to take up the slack when the war production ends," Martin said. "But the fact is that many industries have no money to re-convert to make these things. Their reserves are going to the government in taxes."

Too Late After War
"It will be too late when the war is over for Congress to act. First of all, it takes time to get any such bill through Congress—precious time. Second, any relief then would have to take the form of giving back to industry some of the money it has paid in taxes, and that would be difficult."

Now nobody wants to make money out of re-conversion. It would be possible to survey any plant and estimate what it would cost to restore it to its approximate condition before the war. The money could be set up in a special account, to be used for no other purpose.

"And finally, when the job is done, the government could send in accountants to see how much was spent. If the whole amount was not needed, whatever was left could be paid back to the government."

Time For Public to Know
At the beginning of the war, Martin pointed out, most of the country's important industries were operating balanced, successful plants, perfected over a period of years. They immediately abandoned the work they had been doing and switched to war production.

"They were asked to break up their whole structures and establish great, oversized war machines, capable of producing the specialized war equipment required," Martin said. "They did so."

In most instances the industries knew that their corporate life went into the boiling cauldron of the war effort. Up to now they have not inquired how they are to get their corporate life out of that cauldron. They have not been complaining, but it is time the public knew their status.

"Now since the war began taxes have been increased, and nothing has been done to permit industry to extricate itself from the war machine. We are not allowed to set up reserves before taxes for rehabilitation and re-conversion."

Vital Part of Planning
"There are laws in existence that call for repayment to the government of any so-called surplus profits. And the cost of re-conversion is not a cost that can be taken into account under these laws."

"One thing people ought to realize that this isn't a proposal simply to help industry. It's a vital part of post-war planning, and it is just as important to the soldier who is being demobilized or to the war worker seeking a new job. Unless something is done, there will be no jobs for many of the soldiers and war workers."

Martin suggested that in industries where the strain of war conversion is now lessening on engineering staffs they might establish post-war planning departments. New materials, new inventions, new techniques developed under the pressure of war will be of vast value in peacetime, provided industry is able to convert to make them.

Cold Drawn Steel Used For Bullets

(By International News Service)

CLEVELAND—Cold drawn steel for bullet cores today were flowing out of the plants of the American Steel & Wire Co., U. S. Steel subsidiary, in ever increasing numbers, surpassing anything recorded in production of that type anywhere at any time.

The cold drawn bar steel has been developed from open hearth steel which has proved suitable for use in the core, or "stinger" of machine gun ammunition. Previously production of cores was limited sharply because specifications called for electric furnace steel and centerless ground bars. The capacity for production of this type was curtailed by lack of centerless grinders.

The use of cold drawn steel bars for machine gun ammunition cores eliminates the use of electric-furnaces for this type of production and releases them for use in other types of steel production in which they are essential. In addition, no more centerless grinder machines need be produced for this type of work.

Gold Bars Beat Demings, 2-1, In Tight Nine-Inning Fray

Only Two Class A Teams Will Remain Undefeated After Tonight's Clashes

After the dust clears from the Centennial park diamond tonight, only two teams will remain undefeated in the Class A softball league. The Gold Bars nosed out Demings, 2 to 1, in nine innings last night to leave the Gold Bars, Recreation and Bliss with records unmarred. In the other Class A contest last night Strains beat the Electric Furnace club 10-5.

The Gold Bars copped the game from Demings when Sarge Gregg, Deming hurler, walked a man with the bases loaded in the extra frame.

A change in tonight's schedule puts the Recreation and the Gold Bar on the field for the first game, rather than the last. Scotts and the Salem China will play the second game.

In the Class B games last night, the Friends bowed to Sheens, 10 to 0, and the Twin Beauty nine drubbed the Presidents, 12-6.

KENT'S FOOTBALL PLANS ABANDONED

Kent, June 8.—Kent State university has cancelled its 1943 football schedule and will abandon the sport for the duration. Head Coach Don Starn said today.

Starn has accepted a commission of lieutenant (senior grade) in the Navy and reports for duty July 1. Dr. A. Sellow Roberts, head of the history department and former Kent wrestling coach, has been named to direct any athletic program the Golden Flashes may have during the war. Roberts said the university would attempt to have basketball, baseball and wrestling if enough male students are available.

Midwest To Have Football Despite Handicaps Of War

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, June 8.—The mighty, sprawling midwest is determined to live up to its tradition of turning out great football teams this coming season, despite the tremendous handicap imposed by war.

Every major school is resolved to play a full schedule, enlisting all available talent for the task. Freshmen will be used for the first time. From Ohio to Nebraska and from Minnesota to Oklahoma coaches of 20 conferences are attempting to solve their outstanding problem—a terrific manpower shortage. Almost to a man they are agreed it can be done.

In the "Big Ten," rated as the nation's strongest intercollegiate conference, schedules drawn two years ago have been revamped to provide 15 additional games with strong midwest service teams like Great Lakes, the nation's foremost service eleven last year; the Iowa pre-flight Seahawks and the Camp Grant Warriors.

The Big Ten dropped all inter-collegiate contests worthy of the name to concentrate on opponents in its own backyard, thus helping to ease the transportation problem. Michigan has cancelled its game with Pennsylvania and Ohio State has given up its long trip to play Minnesota and will meet Great Lakes instead.

Ohio State, 1942 Big Ten titleholder and voted national champion in the Associated Press Poll, had only eight overclassmen and 24 freshmen left at the end of spring training, and Coach Paul Brown said only 12 of them would be around by fall. Only service men present at Columbus are army trainees, who are prohibited from playing football.

The only schools of fair importance which have quit football for the duration, because of the manpower situation, are Creighton university and Toledo, Ohio, university—both regarded as essentially basketball strongholds.

The University of Detroit, whose coach, Gus Dorais, will direct the Detroit Lions professional team this fall, is a doubtful starter.

Some coaches will be forced to comb civilian male enrollment for a suitable starting eleven. Others, like Illinois, Michigan, Northwestern, Purdue, Minnesota and Notre Dame—which will have Navy V-12 trainees—obviously will have a decided advantage over schools which do not have this potential talent available.

Notre Dame, the principal independent, has passed up its games with Southern California and Stanford but will retain such distant foes as the Army, Navy and Georgia Tech. The fighting Irish also will play four Big Ten teams plus the Great Lakes Sailors and the Iowa Seahawks.

Scheduled for 15-Round Fight With Lloyd Marshall In Cleveland

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, June 8.—Long-armed Jimmy Bivins puts his so-called "duration light heavyweight championship" on the firing range tonight in a 15-round affair with Lloyd Marshall, claimant to the California light heavy and middleweight crowns.

Matchmaker Larry Atkins expects 20,000 customers to part with $75,000 for the privilege of witnessing the outdoor skirmish in this city's lakefront stadium.

Bivins won his duration diadem in an elimination tournament staged by Atkins and is listed by the National Boxing association as the logical contender for the 175-pound title held by Coast Guardsman Gus Lesnevich.

The Cleveland Negro competes on either side of the 175 pound mark and hasn't lost a fight since Heavyweight Bob Pastor decisioned him in April of 1942. Jimmy later evened the score with Rapid Robert and beat Lesnevich in a non-title bout. He also wins over Tam Mauriello, Lee Savold, Anton Christofordis, Ezzard Charles, Bill Soose and Joe Muscallo.

The dusky Marshall is also a native Clevelander but has dominated most of his scrapping on the west coast. Bivins is an 8 to 5 favorite in the betting markets but Marshall isn't selling himself short.

"I am 29," he said, "and Bivins, they say, is only 22. He's got seven years of youth on me, and weight, and reach. But I've still got my speed, and experience—there's nothing like experience—and the knowledge that I could handle him back in 1940."

Fight Manager Al Weill now owns the contract of young Lou Hanbury, Washington batter who outpointed NBA featherweight champion, Jack Callura in a non-title fight.

Manager Mel Ott of the Giants rates the Cardinals as a more likely pennant winner than the Dodgers.

RAMIREZ PLEDGES NEUTRAL STAND

Argentina President Cites Loyal Cooperation With The Americas

(By Associated Press)
BUENOS AIRES, June 8.—Argentina's day-old military government headed by President Pedro Ramirez was pledged today to an international policy of neutrality "for the present" and "loyal cooperation with nations of the Americas in conformance with existing pacts."

The Ramirez government was sworn in last night, succeeding the short-lived provisional government of Gen. Arturo Rawson, who resigned suddenly yesterday after wresting control from isolationist President Ramon S. Castillo in a lightning revolution Friday.

In a communique outlining his immediate policies Ramirez said: "The republic of Argentina affirms its traditional policy of friendship with loyal cooperation with the nations of the Americas in conformance with existing pacts."

"With respect to the rest of the world its policy is for the present one of neutrality. The provisional government believes, moreover, that it is necessary to express that it sustains the principle of absolute autonomy of states to set up their own standards of government."

Military Domination
"In that concept it will not tolerate any foreign influence because the Argentine people maintain and will maintain in the face of any vicissitudes that might occur the representative form of government in conformance with the constitution."

Ramirez made no reference to congress, which was to have convened today but was dissolved by decree during Rawson's brief administration. The membership of the new cabinet—eight militarymen to only
